Dear Gina,

I'm writing because you seem to have done something which has extremely annoyed me without your intention. I've struggled for some time as I didn't want to bring it up, but now I really feel I should clear things up with you, so that our friendship doesn't get ruined.

Do you remember when the other day we got together with the girls and you started going on and on about the minor operation I had on my face? That really made me feel bad, as I don't yet feel comfortable talking about it in the presence of other people. What made matters worse was the humorous tone you gave the whole issue which made the situation even more embarrassing. Such thoughtless behaviour is not like you, and made me wonder what could probably have got into you!

I know you didn't mean to hurt my feelings but you did. So, I would greatly appreciate it if I received an apology and, if next time I trust you with a personal problem you were more discreet and sympathetic. We've known each other for a long time and it feels hurtful that you don't know what can disturb me.

I'm sure you'll understand and won't let me down like this or bring me in this position in future.

Yours,
Angela
