Γ. ΠΑΡΑΓΩΓΗ ΓΡΑΠΤΟΥ ΛΟΓΟΥ

Giving up part of your free time volunteering is often considered a waste of time. To my mind, voluntary work is absolutely rewarding although it's not paid work.

To begin with, I decided to express my opinion after reading frankb17's post. Frankb17 says he would never sacrifice his summer holiday cleaning beaches as a volunteer. Well, I think he's wrong there since, as mary91kel claimed, he wouldn't like the idea of swimming at unclean beaches while on holiday. I never thought that I sacrificed my summer holiday when I was a volunteer at the Athens Olympics. I had the ~~once-in-a-lifetime~~ chance to be part of the most important sporting event. What could be more rewarding?

Furthermore, volunteers' contribution is precious as there are so many people in need that professional staff is sometimes not enough. For example, the nurses at the nursing home in my neighbourhood are not enough to take care of all the elderly people there. Moreover, hiring extra staff isn't an affordable option. I feel that my neighbourhood should encourage volunteering in that case.

In conclusion, having had a first-hand experience, I am definitely in favour of volunteering. I firmly believe it benefits both communities and volunteers.
