Γ.

Dear Malala,

After being aware of the terrible suffer you went through, I decided to write you this letter. As a female student myself, I would like not only to express my wholehearted support to your ideals and fight but also share my thoughts on the vital importance of education in general.

First and foremost, I cannot even believe how a today's society can have such old fashioned beliefs and that there are still people who are opposed to girls going to school. Your society seems to be deeply and strictly patriarchal to women. Women with no education are not regarded as equal members and this is atrocious nowadays. Education includes no sex, age, status or ethnic discrimination. On the contrary, it is a fundamental civil right and as such, should be protected.

Consequently, the reasons you fight for are of crucial interest. Uneducated people are often easily influenced by others and thus, can be manipulated or exploited. Critical thinking, technological and scientific advances and everything that can lead mankind to a brighter future, are all accomplished through knowledge, which should be a privilege and an indefeasible right to every citizen on this planet.

To sum up, I strongly believe that your courage can really be a role model to women of developing countries. The attack was just a cause to you and food for thought for the rest of the world.

Keep up fighting and we already thank you for your astounding bravery and the example you set.

With gratitude,

Alex Georgiou
